Use a heat-resistant glass measuring cup with a handle, such as a Pyrex cup, to measure and then later melt the flakes. No, this is not a good idea because real perfume contains too much alcohol, which causes the scent to burn off immediately rather than lasting for the whole candle. If you're at a loss for what to do with your growing shot glass collection, get creative and turn them into interesting candles.

Leo Tyrell reports that the glass candle is burning in Marwyn's study.

When the wax is almost completely set, move the wick into the center of the glass and then leave it to fully set. Wax doesn't boil, it combusts, so be sure you don't heat your wax to a degree above the melting point of the wax. Measure out your wax flakes.

Add the essential oils. No, this is not a good idea because real perfume contains too much alcohol. Put up all your old, half-burned candles into a measuring cup.
