Further north, in the San Francisco Bay Area, in March of what is now Silicon Valley was the scene of first contact, in all its shock and confusion. Native Californians, for instance, have been heavily involved in retelling the stories of the missions, and that would have contributed much to the story. Neither is the question in my mind of Russia and the low grade war with the Aleuts, did Tzar Alexander II sell this land so cheaply or so years later to rid himself of the problem? An Uncommon History of Published July 6th by W. The coastal plains and pine forests were rich lands for hunting, gathering, fishing, and for growing corn. Illustrations, for instance, of bare-breasted Paiute women, and the Pope of Rome in a carriage pulled by black lions.... Most surprising is Saunt's history of events on the West Coast--Russian and a few other things related to indigenous people:
