This book is often classified as a fantasy but I wonder if it is actually more sci-fi.

I read this a couple of years ago and it was supposed to be all about God. While the knowledge I gained about zoology and theology was interesting, it wasn't intriguing enough to keep me awake for more than a few pages at a time and often I found the tidbits a confusing distraction. Never mind whether it's closer to the truth -- it's just too boring, and we need colorful stories to make our lives richer.

I think Pi's childlike mind could not deal with the cannibalism of a loved one and that, in turn, makes you wonder what the whole point of the book is.
