We describe first the results for PTSD, our core research question. The detrimental effects of child abuse on mental health are well documented.

Child abuse is an important public health problem globally, including in Canada. A brief self-report measure of posttraumatic stress disorder.

Although our analysis examined PTSD in relation to events occurring subsequent to the abuse, we also examined the association between child abuse and PTSD.

We used contemporary, nationally representative data to examine the prevalence of 3 types of child abuse: physical abuse, sexual abuse and exposure to intimate partner violence and their association with 14 mental conditions, including suicidal ideation and suicide attempts.
