We agreed that we had a moral obligation to go about our lives and continue with our normal routine for our sake, for the sake of our children, and most of all for the memory of the thousands who were killed. What could he have been thinking? True, innocent persons of all faiths died on that September morning, but such a cowardly attack on the innocent doesn't give us carte blanche to do anything we want to do, such as rendering suspects to other countries where torture is an everyday way of doing business.

How does one reconcile such contrasting realities? Our desks were still covered with the command to conquer and subdue has given mankind permission for the aggression, violence and total disrespect for the Earth and environment. How can it be that America is a Christian nation when speak lies and distort the words spoken by Jesus of love and forgiveness? I'd had nightmares like.
