Sings o'er the sea his evening song, God's praise for his safekeeping. Even so, much was granted us from. It is the cast of the Sower, as he seizes The wheat with his spade And flings across to the clear grain.

Denn in mir jast steigt die grimme Siindflut, bricht aus meinen Augen. In the twilight The shadowy woods darkened as I went And the yearning brooks of my home; No more did I know these lands. Alles ist freundlich wohlwollend verbunden, Bietet sich tros-tend und traurend die Hand, Sind durch die Nachte die Lichter gewunden, Alles ist ewig im Innem verwandt. The bishop sent to bid her Before his court appear; Yet must he grant her pardon She was so passing fair.

It must be won through ordeal. Withered by grief's long weeping. None but Your Subtle Ear. Therefore, O Earth, his presumption Drives him away from your breast, and your tender Gifts are in vain; ever and ever too high Does the proud heart beat! Leaving the sweet meadow of his shores Man must go out into flowerless waters.
